Negotiating a Way of Life: Initial CREE Experience With the Administrative Structure Arising from the James Bay Agreement. Report prepared by ssDcc Inc., October 1979, 178 pages.

Contains three short papers focusing on the new administrative structures which have emerged from the James Bay and Northern Quebec Agreement. The first traces the new Cree regional administration from its beginning, the second gives a brief view of the new structures in operation, and the third looks at the effect of the Agreement on the local community. All papers are concerned with how the Agreement affected the Cree - no discussion of the Inuit. No bibliography; appendix contains the principal provisions of the Agreement which relate to the James Bay Cree.

Report to Northern Mineral Advisory Committee on Access to Lands for the Purpose of Mineral Exploration,

by The Sub Committee on Land Alienation,
Chairman: H. Giegerich. Presented Tuesday, January 13, 1981, Whitehorse, Yukon.

Identifies impediments to the mining industry in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories. Impediments are proposed land alienations for single or limited use purposes, such as national parks, proposed I.B.P. ecological sites, wildlife reserves and areas of interest, and native land claims.

James Bay, the Plot to Drown the North Woods. (Sierra Club, 1972), 190 pages.

This book describes the inception of the James Bay Project noting the inadequacy of economic and environmental studies and the absence of consultation with the natives in the area. It places the development project in a context which includes federal-provincial antagonism and provincial determination to exert the authority over the northern part of the province. The book was written before negotiations leading to the James Bay Agreement were underway and focuses instead on the threat to the lifestyle of the James Bay Cree.

Canada Funded Development Systems: First Phase Report, prepared for the Department of Indian and Northern Affairs. (Ottawa, 1979), 207 pages.

A study of the native people of northern Canada and Quebec, focusing on development systems which have emerged as a result of land claims settlements in northern Quebec. Examines the emerging relationship between an established co-operative movement and the newer corporate structures, with reference to corporate structures developed as a result of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act. Alternative ways of approaching the development needs and aspirations of native people are tentatively mapped out.

An examination of the implications of land claims upon control of mineral resources; the author states that benefits flowing from the ability to control natural resource developments are equally as important as financial benefits derived from taxes, royalties, etc. Therefore, settlement of land claims must be achieved prior to the approval of natural resource developments.

EASTERN ARCTIC STUDY

The Centre for Resource Studies and the Institute of Local Government, both of Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario, are undertaking a study of the ways in which the land claim of the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada (ITC) may affect local government and mineral development in the Northwest Territories (NWT). Financial support for the study is being provided by an independent agency, the Donner Canadian Foundation. Advisory support is being provided by the ITC, the the federal government, the Government of the Northwest Territories, and many other agencies, companies and interested groups.

The objectives of the Eastern Arctic Study include the following:

1. to study the potential impact of the settlement of ITC land claims, and of constitutional development in the NWT, on local government in the ITC area;

2. to study the potential impact of these changes on mineral development (including both petroleum and mining) in the ITC claim area.

3. to present the results of this research in a manner which will permit its use by northerners and other interested parties to anticipate possible difficulties and mitigate their effects.

Local government is extremely important to the residents of the Northwest Territories, because local councils and committees provide services that are basic to everyday needs. In addition, a community's local government can often act as the interpreter and advocate of peoples' interests and needs.

We expect the land claim negotiations to result in two related outcomes.

i Local governments will be given increased responsibilities in the land claim area. Some changes are already in progress, chiefly through the initiative of the communities themselves and of the Government of the Northwest Territories. ITC also supports stong local government. The phrase 'local government' refers to any governing authority established below the territorial level. It could include, for example, regional governments as well as hamlet or settlement councils and their committees.

ii There will be a significant increase in the degree of influence exerted by local governments, and by native institutions such as development corporations and cooperatives, on resource planning and the mineral development process.

Thus we expect the settlement of claims to affect significantly the climate for mineral development in the NWT. Native people will have strengthened local governments and an expanded role in planning the nature and direction of resource development.

The possibilities for mineral development in the ITC claim area are substantial, and the future of resource development in this region has implications for the welfare of all northerners, and for all Canada. It is therefore important that all parties to the negotiating process understand the possible consequences of their decisions and actions. The purpose of this study is to contribute to that understanding.
